

Testimonials

"I took this course about 3 years ago and it was awesome. I would recommend it to anyone wanting to know more about designing and planning a city." – Monica Manwaring, Keller Williams

"After practicing traditional landscape architecture for over a decade, Good Urbanism 101 challenged what I had come to believe was good design. The course identified the foundation of what makes great cities and what is required to achieve them. This interaction with Professor Allen and Professor Dagenhart encouraged me to enroll at Georgia Tech, twelve years after earning my undergraduate degree, to further study urban design." –Geoff Boyd

"The vision for the Beltline could never have happened without the fundamental understanding of cities, infrastructure systems and urban design that I developed while studying under Richard Dagenhart, David Green, and Doug Allen at Georgia Tech." –Ryan Gravel

"This is an excellent set of presentations as either a re-fresher for professionals or for people new to the issues of our built environment. The city should require NPU representatives to take this before they can serve."

"The topics were very enlightening—I look at the city with a whole new perspective! If more citizens took this course, I think it would have a major impact on the political mandates we give our civic leaders."

"The course is ideal for government officials to understand the kind of environment that we can shape if everyone involved understands the consequences of the decisions that are made every day in the planning of our built environment."

"Seeing and hearing about the effect and impact of fundamental design choices on our lives and on the well-being of a City or urban area was profound. To have it delivered in such an entertaining and yet educated and thought-provoking way was beyond my expectations."

"This course...should be a prerequisite for any elected official whose work comes within a stone's throw of a street corner. To not have this information when doing the business of the government that they were elected to do is tragic at best, and irresponsible at worst."

"I can't wait for Good Urbanism 201."

"Since the City Charter of 1973 for Atlanta mandates citizen participation in CDP issues, this course would be an excellent training tool for citizen volunteers who function as neighborhood representatives."
